

Overall Title

Topic Title

Produced
by

Conor O'Neill (cponeill@wit.ie)

Department of Computing and Mathematics

Waterford Institute of Technology

<http://www.wit.ie>

<http://elearning.wit.ie>

Content Heading

Part of designing is giving the client an idea of how their copy will work with the design. You don't want to make it difficult for them to envision how the final website will look. Sure, you could get the content from them and plug it in, but then you are forcing them to divide their attention between the content and the design. Plus, they may not have all the content written yet.

Text generators allow you to create filler text — usually Latin — that typically makes no sense, but completes the look of the design. Most generators allow you to specify the number of paragraphs and then provide the dummy text which you can copy and paste into your mockup.

